SENATORS MURRAY, ALEXANDER REACH BIPARTISAN DEAL ON HEALTH BILL

This week, our In Focus section reviews the bipartisan health deal reached by Senators Patty Murray (D-WA) and Lamar Alexander (R-TN), both members of the Senate's Health, Education, Labor, & Pensions (HELP) Committee. Bipartisan talks around a bill to stabilize insurance markets have been ongoing for months, with discussions resuming after the Senate pulled a vote on the Graham-Cassidy reform bill last month. The Murray-Alexander bill, for which a discussion draft has been circulated, seeks to stabilize insurance markets through several key actions around cost-sharing reduction (CSR) payments to insurers and Section 1332 waivers, as well as several additional provisions. Below, we provide a summary of the key provisions as they stand.

Cost-Sharing Reduction Payments

Under the Affordable Care Act (ACA), qualifying Exchange plans are eligible to receive CSR payments, which are made to the insurers to reduce out-of-pocket costs, including deductibles, copayments, and coinsurance, to beneficiaries. Enrollees with incomes at or below 250 percent of the federal poverty level who purchase a Silver plan on the Exchange are eligible for CSR payments. Late last week, President Donald Trump signed an executive order to immediately terminate CSR payments to insurers, a move many insurers had anticipated, but that is at least partially driving increased premiums and lower insurer participation for 2018. Federal outlays for CSR payments are roughly $7 billion a year. The Murray-Alexander agreement would fund CSR payments for the remainder of 2017, as well as for 2018 and 2019. This provision is aimed at providing pricing stability for Exchange insurers, as well as encourage insurers to remain in Exchange markets for the next two years.

Section 1332 Waivers

The ACA provided for states to apply for Section 1332 waivers to waive certain provisions of the law and implement insurance market innovations. The Murray-Alexander bill would make several changes to the Section 1332 waiver process to allow for greater state flexibility and expedited review and approval. The bill modifies language around affordability and budget neutrality, allowing for coverage that is “comparable” in affordability, rather than “as affordable as” coverage absent the waiver. Additionally, states may use the entire life of the 1332 waiver, which would be extended from five to six years under the bill, to calculate budget neutrality. Further, the Murray-Alexander bill would cut the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) review time of 1332 waiver proposals in half, from 180 days to 90 days, as well as provide an expedited 45-day review option. Finally, the bill allows for automatic approval of waivers that have previously been approved.

Authorization of Funding for State Reinsurance Programs

The Murray-Alexander bill would authorize funding for state-initiated reinsurance programs; however, it does not provide funding for the programs, except if excess savings are generated under the bill. Alaska received approval this summer to establish a state-based reinsurance program under a 1332 waiver.

Expanded Access to High-Deductible Exchange Plans

Under current law, enrollment in high-deductible “catastrophic” coverage plans on the Exchange is limited to individuals age 30 or younger. The Murray-Alexander bill would expand enrollment in these plans, which are not eligible for Exchange subsidies, to individuals of any age.

Enrollment Outreach Funding

The Murray-Alexander bill would restore funding that had been pulled by the Trump Administration for enrollment outreach. The funds will be distributed to states, but would be returned to the federal government for enrollment outreach purposes if not fully used by the state.

Interstate Compact Regulations

The ACA established an option for interstate compacts, allowing insurance to be sold across state lines, but as of yet, no regulations have been issued by CMS. The Murray-Alexander bill would require CMS to publish regulations and guidance around this option for states.

The Agency for Health Care Administration will leverage $303 million in funding from counties to draw down an additional $487 million in federal Medicaid dollars. State Releases DSH Payments to NYC Public Hospital System. Upon completing a preliminary analysis of the financial status of hospitals eligible to receive Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) Payments, New York State has agreed to release $360 million of the $380 million owed to NYC Health + Hospitals, New York City's public hospital system. The state had withheld the funds due to cuts in the DSH program that went into effect on October 1; in response the city had threatened to sue the state. In a letter to NYC H+H President Stanley Brezenoff, New York Medicaid Director Jason Helgeson went on to note that subsequent DSH allocations will be determined once the state is informed of Congressional action to restore DSH funding. The letter goes on to say that an initial review of hospitals' finances suggests that no hospital is in imminent threat of insolvency, and that the state has established a reserve fund in the event a hospital is on the brink of insolvency. Department of Health Reconsiders Regulation for Cardiac Catheterization Labs. The New York Department of Health is reconsidering how it approves cardiac catheterization labs that perform percutaneous coronary intervention. The state has used volume as the deciding factor, requiring cardiac catheterization labs to perform a minimum number of procedures, based on evidence that higher volume leads to better quality and outcomes. As part of the state's Regulatory Modernization Team, that regulation is being re-evaluated. As reported in Politico New York Health Care, as a result of hospital consolidation, a physician may operate at more than one site, meaning that the number of procedures performed at any one site will be lower. Further, evidence shows that mortality rates at high-volume hospitals are no better than at low-volume hospitals. Recommendations from the Regulatory Modernization Team will be forwarded to the Department of Health for consideration.

New York State Commissioner of Health Weighs in on CHIP Program. Dr. Howard Zucker, Commissioner of New York's Department of Health, has indicated that New York will soon experience a budget shortfall for the state's CHIP program should Congress fail to extend the program. In a letter to Acting Health and Human Services Secretary Eric Hargan and Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services Administrator Seema Verma he indicated that New York cannot continue the current program without federal funding. He indicated that the state would need to call a Special Session of the legislature to respond to the funding gap, but that it was unlikely that the state would be able to replace a potential loss of up to $1 billion in federal funding. Currently 350,000 children across the state are enrolled in CHIP. In comparison, over 2 million children under the age of 18 are enrolled in New York's Medicaid program. Read More

Targeted homeless populations include veterans, victims of domestic violence, frail or disabled senior citizens, young adults with histories of incarceration, homelessness or foster care, chronically homeless individuals and families, individuals eligible for Medicaid Redesign Team funds, as well as individuals with health, mental health and/or substance use disorders. ABC 7 New York/Associated Press reported on October 14, 2017, that 19 states have filed a lawsuit against President Donald Trump's administration for halting the Affordable Care Act (ACA) cost-sharing reduction (CSR) subsidies. The lawsuit claims the Trump Administration violated a federal law by ending a legally mandated system that was currently in operation. Congressional Democrats are currently working on a bipartisan deal to restore CSR funding by the end of 2017. The subsidies, worth $7 billion this year, help lower out-of-pocket costs, including co-payments and deductibles, for individuals in qualifying plans on the Exchange. The Congressional Budget Office previously estimated that premiums would increase by 20 percent without the CSR payments. Read More
